

MANEUVERING YOUR COACH AROUND TOWN

By Jon Usle

I know that some folks pull a toad, so that they can park their coach at a campground and hit the sights with their toad. This article is to help you when it's just you, your coach and the open road.

I consider myself one of the lucky ones within our little hobby. Lucky in the sense that I get to drive a bus every day at my job. I am a school bus driver. Any coach owner that is not a full timer has to take a few minutes to reacquaint themselves with their coach before going out for a spin. Most of this process is mental. You must keep in mind your coach is wider, longer and taller than your personal car.

When I go on field trips at work, we get directions from our dispatch office. Our trip destination might be a zoo, a museum, an amusement park, another school, etc. We drop off the students and then the fun begins. Fun you say? Yep, now where am I going to park? Some locations have large parking lots and the buses are sent to the far side of the lot away from the cars. Many times, we have to park off property or a few blocks away in a designated lot.

Some amusement parks have an area set aside for buses and RV's. Disneyland in Anaheim, CA is a lot of fun. You pull into a massive parking structure

- Tow your rear-wheel and 4WD automatic transmission vehicles with ease.
- Quickly disconnect your vehicle transmission while sitting in the driver's seat.
- Tow all four wheels on the ground.
